“Whenever I tell someone about how we went to another health plan and then switched back to Rocky Mountain, they say, “You aren’t the first one.”

A contractor here recommended Rocky Mountain when we moved here. We got tired of your monthly fees and tried another plan – that sales rep told me that another company covered all expenses that Medicare covers.

My wife had part of her colon removed. She had to spend part of recovery in nursing home. The other plan covered only the first three days of expenses. If we’d still been with Rocky Mountain, it would have been half (or less) the expense.

I called the insurance rep to try to rectify this. The guy didn’t know what he was talking about – he was no help at all. So I thought ‘Forget this’. We came back to Rocky Mountain. the other plan wasn’t worth it. It just costs more in the long run.

It’s interesting...whenever I tell someone about how we went to another health plan and then switched back to Rocky Mountain, they say “You aren’t the first one.” A relative of mine later found out about my experience and he said, “You should have told me before you did that. I would have said to stay with Rocky Mountain.”
