Obligations As An Applicable Large Employer

Health care reform can be complicated. At Rocky Mountain Health Plans (RMHP), we’re here to help you understand the information that matters to you as an Applicable Large Employer.

The Applicable Large Employer (ALE) Mandate
Applicable Large Employers are defined as one with 50 or more full-time (FT) employees, including full-time equivalents. For employers with 50-99 employees, the entire ALE mandate began in 2016.

Learn more about the 2020 ALE Mandates inside.
ALEs have the following three primary responsibilities. Employers may face penalties if the coverage does not meet the standards or no coverage is offered.

Determining Affordable Coverage

Employers can use these Safe Harbor methods. Different methods may be used as long as they’re used consistently among like employees. Affordability is based on employee-only coverage on the lowest priced plan offered.

Form W-2
- Wages the ALE pays the employee for the current year, as reported in Box 1 of Form W-2 for the current year

Rate of Pay
- Employee’s hourly pay x 130 hours
- Example: Hourly employee earns $15/hour x 130 hours = $1,950 (rate of pay) x 9.78% = $190.71/month

Federal Poverty Level (FPL)
- Calculated based on the lowest FPL for a single individual. Lowest in 2020 = $17,236
- Example: $17,236/12 = $1,436.33 x 9.78% = $140.47

If an employer offers multiple health care coverage options, the lowest-cost MEC option available to the employee will apply for all options.
The Penalties Defined

Employers may be subject to the following penalties if:

- The three responsibilities are not met and
- At least one full-time employee is enrolled in the Marketplace and receives a premium tax credit

Employer Notices

Section 1411 Certification
Employers will receive certification when an employee has enrolled in a health plan through the Marketplace and has qualified for Premium Tax Credits for a calendar month.

IRS 226J Letters
The IRS will send 226J letters to employers subject to the Employer Mandate. If the IRS believes the employer did not satisfy their Employer Mandate responsibilities, the letter will include an assessed financial penalty, called the Employer Shared Responsibility Payment (ESRP). It is important employers take immediate action to develop a response to the IRS within the time frame provided in the letter. Detailed documentation, including previously reported Forms 1095-C, will help to reduce or eliminate the ESRP assessed.
